Syllabus: Math 1272, Calculus II, Summer 2009

Section 001, M-F 9:05-11:00, ApH 226

Instructor: Erin Manlove
Office: Vincent Hall 503
Office Hours: 11 a.m.-12 p.m. M-F
E-Mail: emanlove@umn.edu
Homepage: Follow the link from www.math.umn.edu/~emanlove/

Grading: The final grade will be composed of a final exam, three midterm exams, and a quiz score. The final exam contributes 1/3 of the final grade, each midterm contributes 1/6 of the grade, and the quiz score contributes 1/6 of the grade. The exams will take place in class on the following schedule:

Midterm 1: Friday, June 26
Midterm 2: Friday, July 10
Midterm 3: Friday, July 24
Final Exam: Friday, August 7

It is crucial that you take every exam. Any exam missed without prior consent will be graded as a zero. When permission is given for a missed exam, the final will be re-weighted accordingly.

Homework: Homework will be assigned each day according to the schedule. Homework will not be collected, but you are responsible for all the material covered in the homework. A portion of each class period will be devoted to working through example problems for the material covered in lecture the day before. In order to take advantage of this, you will need to look at the homework problems on the day they are assigned and come to class ready to ask questions.

Quizzes: There will be both in-class and take-home quizzes each week. The quizzes will consist of problems similar to the harder homework problems. In-class quizzes are meant to give you experience in an exam-like setting, so there are no books, notes, or calculators allowed, and you must work alone. Take-home quizzes are meant to give you a chance to practice writing up complete solutions in a stress-free environment. You may use any outside help, but you must write up your own solutions.

Quiz corrections and make-up quizzes: You may earn extra credit points if you write out corrections for the problems you miss on an in-class quiz. Each person’s lowest in-class quiz score will be dropped at the end of the semester. There are no make-up quizzes; if you miss class on a quiz day, you will get a zero. Contact me if special circumstances prevent you from taking more than one quiz.

Incompletes: Incompletes are restricted to students who have completed all but a small portion of the course with a grade of C- or better, who are prevented from completing the course by some severe unexpected event.